

those who loved me best. Things grew blacker than even my blind eyes had made them before.

"I didn't fear. I didn't even think. I just drifted, without an effort, without a thought, into blackness.

"Suddenly I saw a dazzling light—brighter than any fire I had ever seen. From out the great, golden flame I saw two hands, while a voice, clearer than any I had ever heard, said: "Dorothy, your sufferings are over. Get up! You can walk!"

"Then I heard mother asking me if I knew her."

Dr. Norman, an eminent London physician, who had given her but a few brief hours of life that Sunday morning, was nonplussed when he saw his patient Monday.

"Her's is the most unusual case I have known," he said. "I should have said Saturday evening that it was quite impossible for her to have ever stood for one moment again upon her feet, and now I just saw her running down stairs. I don't know what to say about it."

Meanwhile Dorothy is wearing her sister's clothes, for she herself has been an invalid so many years that her wardrobe is extremely limited.

NOTED WOMAN LEAVES FORTUNE TO CHARITY

Omaha, Neb., March 7.—The deep mystery of the life of Anna Wilson, Omaha's notorious scarlet woman, is sealed by the grave. Nobody knows who she was or where she came from.

When she closed her resort last summer she gave the property to the city for use as an emergency hospital. Over a great protest against "tainted money" the city council accepted it.

Now her will has been filed for probate and it is found she left an
